

HOLOCAUST AND OTHER DENIERS

As an avid reader of history, I have a fair number of books in my library on World War II. Several of those books focus on the Holocaust. The authors of the books, including writers of the newer publications, interviewed both former Nazis who were involved in the gassing of the Jews at the different death camps, and those who were among the fortunate ones who survived Hitler and Himmler's final solution project. Despite the reality of this historical tragedy, and all the irrefutable evidence of the millions of murders that occurred under the crazy corporal from Austria, there is a not insignificant number of people, most notably Iran's President Mahmoud Ahmadinejad, who deny that the Holocaust happened.

When different ones asked the apostle Peter if he was not one of the Lord's disciples, they were not asking without evidence. Some said they knew Peter was one of Christ's disciples, because his speech betrayed him to be a Galilean (Matt. 26:73). A servant of the high priest and kinsman to Malchus asked Peter, "Did not I see thee in the garden with him?" (John 18:26). The above two charges, based on evidence combined with Peter's very presence in the palace, proved the people's persuasion beyond a shadow of doubt. Despite all the evidence, though, Peter denied that his having been Christ's disciple ever happened.

There is absolute proof that Dave Miller preached a sermon outlining the process and otherwise participated in the reevaluation/reaffirmation of elders at the Brown Trail Church of Christ in Bedford, Texas. The insurmountable evidence available on CD and on the Internet absolutely proves to any open-minded rational person that it happened. Just yesterday, September, 8, 2009, my wife and I had lunch with a Christian couple who were members at Brown Trail when this unscriptural process began. Did it happen? They know it happened. They were there! It is absolutely astounding to them that people are unwilling to even read the evidence, thereby doing an Ahmadinejad impersonation claiming "it never happened."

Other than the claim of "it didn't happen," all that is contributed by these present deniers is stony silence or personal attacks against those who know the truth and do their best to encourage brethren to deal with the problem in the open. The only offers to discuss the issues are disingenuous, being accompanied by a demand for a vow of silence. Now, in fact, even the so-called proposed discussions carry their own vow of silence condition. Like Ahmadinejad operates, they demand, "We talk, you listen." When they finish talking, the silence starts all over as deafening as ever.

Adolph Hitler and his Nazi henchmen did their best to conceal the evidence of the Holocaust. Eventually they were found out, and the truth was believed by all except by a few evidence denying hangers on. The evidence of the false teaching and practice of Dave Miller will eventually also convince all but a few hardcore deniers. Their end will be the same as those who deny the mass murder of the Jews. They will have marginalized themselves as those who would rather hold to their own false version of history instead of admitting to reality.
